Reasons for Allowance

1. The applicant has amended significantly to the independent claims. The amended independent claims now recite “wherein each rule defines an action corresponding to an associated privacy-related action, a logical condition that identifies a condition under which a particular decision is generated, and a decision indicating a manner by which said associated privacy related action is to be performed.” The Examiner notes that the meaning of the term “privacy-related action” was a point of contention, but now is believed to be resolved as it is defined by the specification. This definition of this term is explicitly defined in page 4 of the specification, paragraph 2.

The closest prior art, Kido, recites the construction of a rule for “access”, a privacy related action as defined by the specification. However, Applicant’s amended claim now recites “constructing a rule for each of said privacy-related actions, wherein each rule defines an action...”, which now explicitly include the other elements on the privacy related list, including disclose, release, notify, utilize, update, withdraw consent, give consent, delete, anonymize, depersonalize, and repersonalize. These actions are related to services provided as stated in the specification. Kido fails to disclose the privacy related actions as defined, and the rejection of 6/01/05 has been overcome.

No art further disclosing the limitations of the privacy related actions maintaining the structure as dictated by claim 1 can be found. No motivation in the prior art can be found.

Accordingly, the claims are held to be allowable.

Independent claims 4 and 7 are substantially similar to claim 1, and recite the same amendments. Accordingly, they are allowable for the same reasons.

Dependent claims 2, 3, 5, 6, 8-20 depend on allowable independent claims and are allowable for this reason.
